Honorable Joseph L. Alioto, Mayor
City and County of San Francisco
Room 200, City Hall
San Francisco, California 94102

Dear Mayor Alioto:

Transmitted herewith is my Interim Report of the first year's activities of the 1973-74 legislative session. As you are aware, this is the first two-year session of the California State Legislature and accordingly this report must necessarily be considered a progress report and not a final endeavor. Included in this report is a summary of each bill upon which the City had a policy and which bill was ultimately disposed of by passage or defeat. Those bills which remain in the legislative process I will cover next year in the final report of the session.

During the first year of the two-year session, this office forwarded to department heads 1289 original bills and amendments. On these bills we were given official positions on 447 individual pieces of legislation....246 support positions, 136 oppose positions and 65 watch positions.

Certain bills of particular City interest I should like to mention: Senate Bill 204 (Gregorio), which would increase state financing to combat alcoholism by 12 million dollars over an eighteen month period and could provide San Francisco's local alcoholic treatment programs with $480,000; also of interest, although San Francisco did not take an official position, was Senate Bill 121 (Gregorio), which would boost state support of the arts by more than $777,000.

Of particular interest to San Francisco was the successful passage of Senate Bill 1438, the Marks-Foran Residential Rehabilitation Act. At the request of city officials this bill was introduced on an urgency basis in the first week of August and cleared both houses by the recess date. It authorizes San Francisco to issue up to 20 million dollars in revenue bonds and will enable San Francisco to continue the FACE program for which federal funds are no longer available.

Other bills affecting San Francisco's interests included Senate Bill 59 (Carpenter), authorizing airport security officers to become peace officers, which became law with amendments; Assembly Bill 232 (Powers), calling for state P.U.C. regulation of taxicabs serving airports which the City opposed and which was held in committee, and Senate Bill 160 (Hejedly), relative to establishing BART service to the originally planned areas before it is established from San Francisco to the Airport. This bill was also defeated.

Assembly Bill 2299 (Burton), was introduced at the request of the Port Commission and would authorize the sharing of certain sand and gravel revenues between the Port and the State Lands Commission, which revenues are derived from underwater removal sites under the control of the Port. This bill passed the Assembly and is presently pending before the Senate Committee on Governmental Organization.

The Legislature approved Senate Constitutional Amendment 15 (Mills), allowing gas tax revenues to be diverted into development of rapid transit systems, and it will appear on the June 1974 ballot.

Assembly Bill 1243 (Moretti), which would give 1.1 million state and local government workers the right to bargain collectively, was opposed by San Francisco. It has passed the Assembly and is presently pending in the Senate Committee on Public Employment and Retirement.

Assembly Bill 18 (Burton), would have increased welfare grants to the aged, blind and disabled. This bill was defeated in the final hours of the session. However, reconsideration was asked for and granted and undoubtedly another attempt will be made to reach an agreement on amendments that will allow passage of the bill. At the moment it leaves California in the position of depending on changing welfare grants by regulations rather than by statute. The position taken by the Administration is that to make changes by regulations is legal and that grants can be increased to meet the federal minimums by such regulations. The matter is in litigation, but if the Administration is not correct, at least 600 million dollars in Medi-Cal aid will not be paid to the state by the federal government since the statutory levels of California grants are below federal minimums.

In the 1972 session of the Legislature, one of the major issues were the provisions to be incorporated into a tax reform bill, Senate Bill 90. As originally proposed this measure would have shifted many tax burdens from the state to the counties. The counties of California combined to oppose this legislation and were eventually successful in having written into the bill a provision that any program mandated by the state on the counties would be financed by the state reimbursing each county for its actual costs. The adoption of this provision induced San Francisco to change its position from one of "oppose" to "support". Senate Bill 90 subsequently became law.

It is interesting to note and certainly worthy of pointing out that a great deal of time of the legislative advocates of the counties and cities in the 1973 session was consumed in opposing a new technique in avoidance of the state obligation which was being included in practically all bills imposing new responsibilities on county and city governments. I refer specifically to a section included in each bill which would waive the requirements for reimbursement under the provisions of Senate Bill 90 as enacted in 1972. As a result of these tactics by the Administration, and many legislators, the entire future of Senate Bill 90 has been left in doubt.

Assembly Bill 2299 (Bristow), was introduced as the vehicle for the Port Commission and would authorize the granting of certain land and ground revenues between the Port and the State Lands Commission, which revenues are derived from underwater removal sites under the control of the Port. This bill passed the Assembly and is presently pending before the Senate Committee on Governmental Organization.

The Legislature approved Senate Constitutional Amendment 10 (SCLA), allowing gas the revenues to be divided into the development of rapid transit systems, and it will appear on the June 1974 ballot.

Assembly Bill 1255 (Bristow), which would give 1.1 million state and local government revenues and right to income tax credits, was approved by the Legislature. It has passed the Assembly and is presently pending in the Senate Committee on Public Employment and Retirement.

Assembly Bill 18 (Bristow), would have increased certain grants to the state and distributed. This bill was defeated in the final house of the session. However, reconsideration was asked for and granted and undoubtedly another attempt will be made to pass an amendment on amendments that will allow passage of the bill. At the moment it is in the hands of the Port Commission, depending on changing matters created by regulations rather than by statute. The position taken by the Administration is that to make changes by regulations is legal and to make changes by statute is not. The Administration is not convinced that the bill is in the best interests of California.

In the 1973 session of the Legislature, one of the major issues was the proposal to be incorporated into a tax reform bill, Senate Bill 101. As originally proposed this measure would have shifted many tax burdens from the state to the counties. The counties of California continued to oppose this legislation and were eventually successful in having certain parts of the bill a provision that any program initiated by the state on the counties would be financed by the state requiring each county for the actual costs. The adoption of this provision induced San Francisco to change its position from one of "oppose" to "support." Senate Bill 101 subsequently became law.

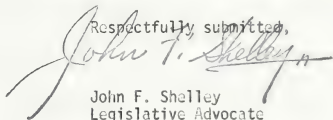

It is interesting to note that currently many of the bills that are introduced in the 1973 session was concerned in opposing a new technique in the conduct of the state obligation which was included in Senate Bill 101. It is interesting to note that many of the bills that were introduced in the 1973 session were introduced in the 1973 session. A section included in each bill which would waive the requirements for the payment of the bills of the state bill to be included in the bill. As a result of these bills by the Administration, and many legislators, the entire future of Senate Bill 101 has been left in doubt.

The office of the Legislative Advocate for San Francisco works continuously with the League of California Cities and the California Supervisors Association and their staffs. We meet each Monday with the representatives from all counties in the California Supervisors Association's office and each Wednesday at the League of Cities' office with the representatives from the cities. By this procedure we coordinate our efforts on all mutual problems. I would like at this time to express the appreciation of myself and the staff of my office for the ready cooperation always made available to us by these two organizations.

Again this year, I would like to take this opportunity to express my sincere appreciation to Mr. Morris Dow and Mr. Bill Barrett of the City Attorney's office for their assistance and cooperation during this past session of the Legislature.

When the Legislature reconvenes in January of 1974 it will immediately start to work on those bills still pending in both houses. We should have an extremely busy session as the members of the Legislature will be introducing new bills as well as working on the above-mentioned legislation.

Respectfully submitted,

LEGISLATIVE REPORT

]973-74 Regular Session

California State Legislature

Submitted to:

Honorable Joseph L. Alioto, Mayor
City and County of San Francisco

October 21,]974

11th & L Building
Sacramento, California

October 21, 1974

Honorable Joseph L. Alioto, Mayor
City and County of San Francisco
Room 200, City Hall
San Francisco, California 94102

Dear Mayor Alioto:

The first two-year session of the California State Legislature has drawn to a close and enclosed herewith is the annual report to you of the Legislative Advocate.

During 1974, the City took official positions on 353 individual pieces of legislation: 179 support positions, 133 oppose positions and 41 watch positions. The City's official positions are formulated by the Board of Supervisors or by the State Legislation Committee pursuant to Administration Code sections 5.5 et seq.

The tabulation enclosed covers all bills upon which the City had a policy. However, some of those bills were more significant than others and a few deserve special mention.

The San Francisco Bay Area Transportation Terminal Act (Assembly Bill 3694, Foran) was signed into law by the Governor and permits development and expansion of the present East Bay Terminal at First and Mission Streets.

Senate Bill 1966 (Mills) became law and meets the BARTD financing emergency by extending the one-half cent sales and use tax in the three BARTD counties until December 31, 1977.

Senate Bill 1552 (Marks) grew out of a dispute over protection of patient identity in San Francisco's methadone maintenance program and was requested by the City's Department of Public Health. The bill passed the Legislature but was vetoed by the Governor.

Senate Bills 1495 and 1722 (Marks) both became laws and extended to all cities and counties the power to make housing rehabilitation loans (locally financed FACE programs) and increased lending limits on Redevelopment Agency residential properties.

Senate Bill 1512 (Carpenter) became law and continued the existing provisions relative to peace officer status of airport security officers engaged in pre-boarding security procedures. We were not able to have removed from the law the requirement that San Francisco security officers be subject to discretionary deputization by the Sheriff of San Mateo County.

Assembly Bill 3587 (Foran) was enacted and will increase revenues of the San Francisco Treasurer's office by allowing for reimbursement more commensurate with costs, services rendered and workload.

Senate Bills 2232 and 2233 (Moscone) were signed by the Governor and were put in at the request of the Police Department and the Coroner, respectively. Senate Bill 2232 simplifies procedures relative to initiating prosecutions for traffic offenses causing accidents. Senate Bill 2233 gives the Coroner discretion in determining the necessity for autopsies in cases of unattended natural deaths.

One carry-over bill from 1973, Assembly Bill 2299 (Burton) would have permitted the Port to share, with the state, revenues from the sale of sand and gravel on Port properties, as was the practice when the Port was operated by the state. The bill could not attract sufficient votes to get out of the Senate Governmental Organization Committee.

Senate Bill 147 (Marks), prohibiting widening of Doyle Drive approach to the Golden Gate Bridge without specific approval of the San Francisco Board of Supervisors, also became law.

Sadly, this report is written in behalf of John F. Shelley, with whom it was my great pleasure and that of his secretary, Miss Betty Sims, to have worked for the past six years. His intimate knowledge of legislative processes and his deep understanding of people made many difficult tasks appear easy. I know you share in our sense of loss of this good man.

The closing weeks of the session were marked by a singular honor for San Francisco in that former Supervisor Leo McCarthy was elected Speaker of the Assembly, winning a narrow victory over another highly respected Assemblyman from San Francisco, Mr. Willie Brown. Another member of our delegation, Mr. John Foran, is Chairman of the Assembly Ways and Means Committee.

On the Senate side of the Capitol, former Supervisor George Moscone is the Majority Party Leader and Senator Milton Marks is Chairman of the Senate Local Government Committee. While reapportionment is causing our City to lose numerical strength, the quality of the men this City sends to the Legislature more than offsets the reductions in representation.

Respectfully submitted,

McMorris M. Dow
McMorris M. Dow
Deputy City Attorney
